MEMORIAL, HALL, COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 4—"A new effort at conquest will be made by some nations as soon as the last war is recovered from unless the peace treaty including the league of nations is ratified."

This is the argument handed out to the people assembled in Memorial Hall, Columbus, today by President Wilson in his first speech of the attempt to force ratification of the treaty on the senate by carrying the fight to them through the people who he hopes to favorably impress with the league plan.

Continuing he said, "the league of nations is the only safeguard against the wars that loom up in the future. Furthermore, the league must be ratified to make good the promise to American soldiers that they were fighting a world war to make future wars impossible."

He declared that our failure to ratify the peace treaty would bring "peace into contempt."

Discussing the efficacy of the league he said, "I would rather have everybody on my side than be armed to the teeth without the league."

Still strong in his belief that he knows the real desires of the people of the nation he said, "I believe I know the heart of the people better than the foes of the league."

The President walked onto the rostrum clad in a neat business suit and was greeted with an outburst of shrieking cheers. Former Governor Campbell made the introductory address. He referred to Mr. Wilson as "the first citizen of the round world." Early in his address the President said, "I have for a long time desired to go out and report to my fellow citizens; I owe no report to anybody else."

Stating that the treaty was so bulky and voluminous that many had not carefully read it, he said, "perhaps you would like to know what is in the treaty?" He said the many speeches he had read on it threw no light on it. He then explained that the treaty was designed to punish Germany for her wrongs. He talked of the lands destroyed, people terrorized and outraged, yet pointed out that the makers of the treaty sought to exercise restraint and justice. He declared the terms of the treaty were harsh but that wronged peoples of Europe deserved reparation.

President Wilson came into contact with pain folks at Denison, Ohio, for the first time on the trip. An old man in the handshaking line said to the President: "I wish you success on your plan Mr. Wilson—I had two sons killed in the war—have only one left and I do not want to lose him in another."

"The treaty contains, among other things, a Magna Charta of labor, a thing unheard of until this interesting year of grace. One of the big things growing out of the treaty is the International Congress of Labor provided for under the terms of the treaty and which will be held in Washington in the near future. And let me tell you," he said grimly and with jaw thrust forward, "that meeting will be held no matter whether the treaty is ratified or not. The discovery has been made that nations are made up of its people and not of a few of its people."

Defending the treaty as a whole President Wilson declared, "If I could not have brought back this kind of a treaty I would not have come back at all."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 4—The most spectacular series of debate and of the most far reaching consequences since the days of the notable Lincoln-Douglass debates of the Civil War started today at Columbus, Ohio, when the President made his first speech in the interest of the peace treaty and league of nations. Waiting on the other end of the wires at Washington, senators opposed to the ratification of the present pact literally sat on the end of the wire to gather the first words of battle and put out counter arguments. Only a presidential campaign could demand the attention of the nation as the President and the opposing senators expect to get on the contest. Meanwhile the Republican senators are closely watching administration affairs, particularly the promise to reduce the high cost of living. Attorney General Palmer has declared that there will be no let up in the federal program and that the living cost problem will not be permitted to be relegated to second place in the interest of the acceptance of the treaty.

ON THE TRAIN WITH THE PRESIDENT, PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 4—President Wilson today embarked on his supreme effort to force the peace treaty and league of nations through the senate. In his private car he outlined the main points in his speech to be made at Columbus in the morning and discussed the campaign on which he has started. Passing through this state he waved at the occasional crowds that had gathered to get a glimpse of the train. His personal physician, Admiral Grayson, declared Mr. Wilson in fine physical trim for the campaign and his voice will be given constant attention as it is absolutely necessary that he return to Washington by October 1st. The President retired early last night as he desired to rise early this morning to put the finishing touches on his Columbus speech. Considerable executive business will be transacted on the train during the trip. The arrangements for the conference between capital and labor will be outlined and the men selected who are to make up the personnel of the conference.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Sept. 4—Columbus is all spruced up for the President's visit here today. Five airplanes left for Newark, N. J. where they will meet the presidential train and escort it to Columbus. Governor Cox will lead the delegation which will escort the President to the state capital. He spoke at 11:30 for about one hour and at one o'clock departed for Indianapolis where he will speak this evening.

SHOPMEN VOTE TO REJECT FOUR CENT INCREASE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 4—The railroad shopmen have voted overwhelmingly to reject the four cent increase offered by President Wilson. While rejecting the money increase the men have voted to leave the matter of strike action up to their own discretion.

AUSTRIA GETS MORE TIME

PARIS, Sept. 4—The Austro-Hungarians have been given an extension of time of three days in which to consider and sign the peace terms. It is now thought that the signing will take place September 12th.

MAHAFFEY MAN
SUES N. Y. C. FOR
$23,000 DAMAGES

Daniel Belford of Mahaffey, has begun suit in the Clearfield county courts against the New York Central Railroad company, wherein he seeks to recover $23,749 which he alleges is due him under the terms of an agreement made with the railroad company May 15, 1915.

Belford is represented by Deputy Attorney General William I. Swoope and in his statement filed declares that while in the employ of the New York Central on February 16th, 1915, he was knocked down and run over by a train in the Clearfield yards and as the result of such occurrence lost both feet.

Subsequently on May 15, 1915, he entered into an agreement or settlement whereby the railroad company paid him $1,000 in cash and agreed to give him employment as watchman until he reached the age of 70 years.

In pursuance of that agreement Belford states that he received the $1,000 and as soon as he was able to get around was given a job as watchman by the company. On April 15, 1919, he alleges he was discharged without cause and suit is brought to recover the amount he would have received had he remained in the employ of the railroad company until he reached the age limit fixed when the settlement was made.

CHALLENGE FOR
LESLIE ROBERTS

Leo A. Hayat, champion middle-weight wrestler of California, arrived in town today for a ten day visit in the hope that he may be able to arrange at match with Leslie Roberts, the Boardman "strong boy."

Hayat was here with the athletic show accompanying the Copping carnival in 1917 and at that time he says he endeavored to get a match with Roberts but for some reason or other Roberts wanted none of his game.

He dropped into The Progress office this morning and authorized the Sporting Editor to issue a challenge to Roberts to wrestle for any size stakes Roberts or Manager Katzman may care to name.

Hayat has many friends in Clearfield who having seen both men work are of the opinion that the California wonder is able to master the Boardman miner.

Any communications addressed to Mr. Hayat care of the Sporting Editor of The Progress will reach him.

500 ENROLL THIS
YEAR FOR HIGH
SCHOOL COURSE

The Clearfield public schools which opened Tuesday last are already down to business, the season's schedule is already in force and effect, and thanks to the splendid organization of the schools the pupils have picked up the "educational thread" where they laid it down May last and are hard at work on their studies.

The first day's registration totaled 1799 pupils, the largest first day enrollment in the history of the schools. Following is the enrollment at the different schools:

High School	500
Junior High	250
Market Street	280
Third Ward	380
Fourth Ward	276
Reedsville	56
Primary Jr. High Bldg.	50

Total 1799

Some idea of the growth of our schools can be secured by noting the large number of pupils in the High School which starts off with 500. We could in each other that they doubt if there is another town of our size in the state with such an attendance in its High School. This fact alone speaks volumes for our High School and the standard it has attained.

City Superintendent Zerfoss will be assisted in his management of our schools this year by a corps of fifty-three teachers.

POPULAR CLEARFIELD COUPLE
WED

A very quiet wedding was celebrated in Trinity Methodist Episcopal church this morning at 6:30 o'clock when the pastor, Rev. William W. Hartman said the words which united in the holy bonds of matrimony Walter E. McMurray and Miss Maud M. Stewart, a couple of Clearfield's most popular young people.

The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Stage and none but the immediate families of the contracting parties witnessed the ceremony.

Following the congratulations, the happy couple departed by automobile for Tyrone where they took a main line train for Philadelphia and Atlantic City where they will spend their honeymoon.

The bride was attired in a blue silvertone traveling suit and wore a black velvet hat.

The groom is a valued employee of the Clearfield Machine shops and a fine young man. His bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Stewart, of Fifth street and one of Clearfield's most charming and most highly respected young ladies.

The Progress joins their legion of friends in heartiest congratulations.

DIDN'T KNOW IT HIT HIM

The last hard electric storm to pass over Clearfield played a joke on our friend and neighbor Samuel I. Snyder. During the height of the storm following a vivid lightning flash and deafening burst of thunder "Jersey" was rocked in his bed as the "in a clean through the tube and the row boat on Lake Erie." "when she was rough", but after the final tremor "Jersey" resumed his interrupted snoring as though nothing had occurred.

He thought no more about it until this morning's rain began, when he discovered a leak in the roof and investigation disclosed that the house had been struck by lightning at the time first mentioned and some fifteen or twenty slate knocked off.

The faculty this year has about eight or ten new teachers and out of this number only three are men.

As yet no one has been procured to lead the music in chapel. This will probably mean that the Glee club will not be organized for some time.

New steel lockers are replacing the coat racks this year. They will undoubtedly be in use next week.

A large number of out of town people are attending school this year.

Miss Margaret Shlien left this morning for Philadelphia, where she will visit with relatives for a couple of months.

Mrs. C. P. Jacob of DuBois entertained the Current Events club Wednesday afternoon at the home of her mother Mrs. G. W. Snyder. Mrs. Dowler, Mrs. Jameson and Mrs. Guernsey Smith read interesting papers. Mrs. Clarence Stewart from Pittsburgh was a guest.

Miss Luella Greenleaf of Huntingdon, is visiting Miss Elizabeth Bain at her home on Whitmer street.

L. B. and George Waring of Keewardin are visiting in town.

Miss Ruth Johnston has returned from a visit with friends in Clearfield.

LOVE'S YOUNG MISTED WHEN
FRIEND COMES ALONG

That some Clearfield married men are furious lovers, when away from home, and that this old world is small place after all, is now known to several Clearfield people and the schools the pupils have picked up the "educational thread" where they laid it down May last and are hard at work on their studies.

BARRETT AND THE BRICK PLANT

Those who had dreams of smoking stacks and sizzling furnaces at the staid old Barrett station are due for a shock or at least a temporary interruption of their dreams. Although The Progress had what it believed to be the correct information of the brick makers who have been unusually active in the county for more than a year the publication of the story of the plant is to be located at Barrett brings a firm denial from any of the officials of the firm interested. J. O. Heitzenberger, Vice President of the Mt. Union Refractories Company at Clearfield last evening and immediately got in touch with the Progress office to issue a statement. He stated that he had no knowledge of the publication of the story before he reached Clearfield and that the story published must have received its information from some other source. In commenting on the activities of the firm in the county he said that "although they had been prospecting in and around Barrett as well as other points throughout the county, it was by no means ascertained that a plant would be located at that point, and that thus far Barrett had received only the amount of consideration given at other points."

Sage Tea Keeps Your Hair Dark

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair loses its color and lustre, or when it fades turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulfur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

The Parrots—father, mother and two charming daughters—live in Southern California. At the time the action begins Stephen Parcot, the father, is in the far North pursuing his avocation as an explorer. Mrs. Parcot has hurried overseas to Belgium to bring back one daughter who has been placed in a convent there. Dimny Parcot (the lead in the picture, played by Blanche Sweet, who also appears as the other sister in several parts of the production) is alone in the beautiful Parcot home. She receives a letter from her loved ones abroad—a letter that almost sends her reason tottering from its throne—a letter that tells her that invading soldiers have committed against both her mother and her sister "the unpardonable sin."

The letter has been one last note of explanation—and a plea that mother and sister be forgotten, a cry that their disgrace be shielded from the world.

With the letter carefully hidden in a wallet, Dimny, half crazed with grief and not figuring the difficulties of the task she has set or herself, sets out to find her loved ones.

Her train is delayed just outside a little town in the Middle West. A chance traveling acquaintance offers aid and, later as Dimny and her acquaintance are walking through a shaded street in the little village just at dusk, the acquaintance, smitten by Dimny's beauty, attempts to force his attentions upon her. Dimny collapses; her reason flees. Only a zephyr of the breath of life remains! Weeks later she recovers her strength, both mental and physical, to find that she has been nursed in the home of the Windsors.

Noll Windsor, an undergraduate at the college in the little town, has learned to love Dimny. She tells him her story—and torn between the fear of all men and the thought that she may waver from her path of chosen duty, leaves the home without announcement, to continue on her journey.

Soon after, young Windsor answers his government's call to serve with Hoover's eBigan Relief commission in the devastated country. He arrives in Washington to secure his passports and discovers Dimny, who has been in the capitol city for some time, unable to continue her journey for the reason that the government has discontinued the issuance of passports to "unmarried" women. Noll and Dimny effect a marriage of convenience, Dimny's passports being secure in no other way.

Upon their arrival in Belgium, Noll, husband in name only, finds it possible to do much to aid Dimny in her search for her people. Together they travel the devastated regions, even penetrating the enemy country—for in those days the United States had not entered the war.

A veritable pawn of fate, it is Dimny's misfortune to encounter the very beast who had ravished her sister. When he sees the fresh young girl from California, Colonel Klemm mistakes her for the sister whom he has so shamefully treated in Belgium. He is mystified—and his passion still leads him. Because he thinks Dimny a spy against the government and because he wishes to possess her again, as he thinks, Klemm hounds Dimny and Noll everywhere they go.

Klemm is outwitted. Dimny's mother and sister are found, but not before a second horror in her rail young life has snapped the thread that tied the little sister to Earth and a bitter disgrace.

Dimny, her mother, Nell, and an interesting little group of refugees, who have been made members of the party are making a mad dash for the Holland border when a bullet sends Mrs. Parcot close to the brink of death. When she recovers she takes back to her husband in the states, only the story of her terrible experience.

Dimny and Noll find that their "marriage of convenience" must be re-enacted as a "marriage of necessity"—necessary because both have come to desire it.

Why? Because in the very first issue that you'll get, if you hustle your dollar right over to me, there is the beginning of a series of articles called Big Country Merchants.

There will be ten of these articles, telling how ten men in ten towns succeeded in making themselves known as the biggest country merchants. There's no secret of their success that isn't open to every storekeeper in this county. Don't you want to get into their class? Don't you want increased farmers' business?

Of course, this article is only part of all the help in the September 13th issue—there are a lot of other articles and stories about farmers and farming for storekeepers and for farmers and farm women, for gardeners and orchardists and poultrymen. And yet 52 big vital issues cost only one dollar, about two cents apiece! Why "hold out"?

stuck to it, and you'd have been a fool if you hadn't!

"Now, then, I put it to you, all we ask is our share. After that, we'll land you anywhere you say, or, if you like, you can have a berth aboard—I'm getting kind of sick of standing watch myself, and a third officer wouldn't come nowadays, ma'am."

Wallen looked first at Laynton, then at Mott, who was glowering and sulen-faced, then back at Laynton again.

"Look here!" he burst out, almost insolently. "Either you're crazy, or I am."

"Oh, no!" retorted Captain Laynton easily. "Neither of us is! You ain't willing to give up gracious like while you think there's a chance you don't have to split the pot, that's all. Mebbe you think I'm blading?"

"Don't fool yourself! We made up our minds from about the minute this hooker was chartered that there was a lot more behind this search-for-a-son business. And now we're sure of it. I'll take you into my cabin and show you why in a minute. But first, to let you know I mean business, you can take a look at my hand."

"We wasn't saying anything till old Wallen got killed, for whatever he was after he was bound to lead us to along with him, eh?"

"Then he shuffled out, and there wasn't anything in his papers that was any good to us—except that money that I turned over to kind of woo your confidence, if you get the idea! But we figured that what he knew the son would know, so mebbe you can figure out why we started to follow the Upolo's itinerary."

"Well, we played in luck—we found you. So long as we thought you were the son we let you have your head, just as we'd done with the old man, without trying to force your hand, because—the grinnin' wickedly—"we're a patient lot."

"But now that I find we're birds of a feather, my lad, we ain't playing that game any more."

"Now, then, we know you were on the Upolo with young Wallen, and what I want to know is what he told you before he died that started you going. You come across with that, and we'll play fair on the divvy; if you don't, you'll wish that whatever saints you swear by that you were in the hands of the authorities answering for that threnat-sitting job back in Singapore, instead of in mine! That's a plain statement—eh? Well, what d'ye say?"

"I say that I'm Wallen," said Wallen steadily. "That I committed no murder in Singapore, and that this treasure-hunt idea is pure imagination."

Captain Laynton scowled. "You conx a mule first," he said significantly; "after that you shun him—out of him. However, I ain't through coaxing yet. Come along to my cabin."

They entered the captain's cabin; and Laynton, spreading out a chart on the locker, stabbed at it with his forefinger.

"Anything familiar about that?" he grinned.

Wallen leaned forward. "Certainly," he replied, in surprise. "It's the north coast of Arru, where Mac-

Indicated the Position.

Knight's station is—where I was brought ashore after I was picked up." Laynton scowled savagely, and picking up a pair of dividers indicated the position with exact precision.

"To the north a bit, among those islands," he snapped. "You know fast enough what I mean."

Wallen shook his head. "Don't you?" Laynton rasped. "Well, how about this?" He pulled a piece of paper from his pocket, and flattened it out on the chart. "They correspond, don't they? You dropped this out of your pocket. I had a Kanaka aboard then, who picked it up and gave it to me."

He smiled at Wallen unpleasantly. "I haven't got that Kanaka now. He disappeared. There's something damned queer about it—and about those shots last night, wouldn't you say? D'ye think I'm a fool—d'ye think I wouldn't stake my oath that mealy-mouthed Indian you brought aboard with you didn't fire 'em? But I still thought you were Wallen then, and I was still for giving you all the rope you wanted."

"Well, here's the latitude and longitude on the paper, and here's the position on the chart, and I guess in a general way we're pretty hot on the scent—it's only the few details that may be lacking when we get there that I'm asking you to supply. What?"

It was a moment before Wallen spoke.

"The position given on that piece of paper had come, Gunga had said, direct from Ram Gulab Singh. There were many islands around Mac-Knight's station, and among them, evidently enough now, Ram Gulab Singh had his lair."

"Do you mean," he asked abruptly, "that you are going there?"

"D'ye think there's any doubt about it?" returned Laynton caustically.

"Then," said Wallen earnestly, "I warn you, you're running the head of every one aboard this ship into a noose. If you want the truth of the whole business, it's this: Years back my father had trouble with a powerful native named Ram Gulab Singh, who was and is the head of many of the Malay pirates, that infest these waters. The man swore revenge. The feud still exists."

"It was to save me from a plot Ram Gulab Singh had hatched to murder me on the Upolo that my father chartered you. Furthermore, there was no accident aboard here when my father died. It was this Kanaka, that you say has disappeared, who murdered him—the man who started this cock-and-bull story about treasure because he is in Ram Gulab Singh's pay, and that paper he gave you was to lure the ship into his master's claws if he was unsuccessful in doing away with my father himself."

"He did away with my father, but he still gave you the paper for the same purpose, except, of course, that I am substituted in my father's place."

There was an incredulous sneer on the faces of the two men.

"Sounds almost as fishy as you writing yourself down dead in the log!" commented Laynton, with an ugly laugh. "Of course, you don't want us to go there, eh? Well, that's all right, and thanks for the warning; but don't worry about us coming to any harm, though it does credit to your heart! We don't scare aboard this ship. Mebbe if there was the prospect of a bit of a scrap it wouldn't stand in our way none, either. Have you by any chance taken note of the crew?"

A sort of savage anger came upon Wallen.

"I want you they look like cut-throats," he said evenly.

"You're wrong!" rejoined Laynton with evil smoothness. "You ain't half looked at 'em, and you don't do 'em credit. Fallen angels are saints alongside of 'em; and there ain't one of 'em but has been aboard here with me for the matter of a good few years—which proves that your yarn about the Kanaka and this 'ere friend of yours, Ram Whine-dye-call-him is another lie."

"I ain't likely you've ever heard of the Monleigh before, because we've got a superstition aboard here that keeping the same name too long is bad luck."

"When we carry cargo it's because times are infernally poor and the picking-thin—the crew has got a preference for private pearl beds, or mebbe the opium trade, or I've even known 'em to horn in on a bit of black-birding by way of variety. We've been living under a kind of righteous restraint, Mr. Man, out of deference to who we thought you were, and I could see the crew was sort of chafing under it; but I guess you'll get a better idea of things from now on, and by the time we get down off Arru again you won't need to be told what to expect if you don't come around to our way of thinking."

He turned suddenly and flipped the little slip of paper to the second officer. "Mott, get away with you, and work up that course—we've had enough pleasure cruising toward Sumatra!"

And then it seemed that for the first time the full significance of the situation dawned upon Wallen—and it was as though a cold thing was at his heart.

"Wait!" he cried hoarsely. "What I've told you is the truth. But if you're bent on your own destruction, then for God's sake get Miss MacKay off the ship first—land her somewhere, anywhere."

It was Mott who answered—but with the locker between them.

"Not by a d—d sight!" he announced with a leer. "I'll take care of the girl."

There was something hideous in the glint of the man's eyes. As with Laynton, all veneer was gone now, and the grin on the heavy lips was an evil thing.

It brought the blood surging to Wallen's temples—and, receding, left his face a deadly white.

"Mott," he whispered queerly, "as God likes, I'll—"

"You stow your jaw, Mott," Laynton interjected, with a flippant laugh, "or you'll be giving Mr. Wallen an unfavorable idea of the discipline aboard here."

For a moment Wallen stared at Laynton without speaking—then the words came with a passionate rush: "You're mad!" he cried. "You're go-

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Mrs. R. F. Fleming, of Bloomington avenue, who was in Clearfield hospital for almost a month was brought home last Saturday. Her improvement is very slow, and will probably be several months ere she will be able to attend to her usual household duties.

The latest hospital report from the condition of young William Addelman, who was so seriously injured last week in the hard clay mines, is that his chances for recovery are favorable, unless blood poisoning sets in, which would impair his chance for life greatly.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wall, Mrs. V. U. Spencer, Lew Vaughn and Miss Dorothy Wolf, Scott Ammerman and Miss Lilla Martin, Messrs. Sol Robinson Emory Daub, Ralph Pilkington and Kelly Bloom were Curwensville people who attended the opera at Clearfield Tuesday evening.

Several Curwensville men were up before Burgess Traister on Tuesday evening. Two were charged with indulging a little too freely from the "flowing bowl." One was assessed $10 and the other $5. The third party was charged with fighting and disorderly conduct and paid into the borough exchequer the sum of $5.00. The case of the fourth man was held over until further investigation as to his guilt could be made.

At this writing (Wednesday night) Rev. I. P. Hawkins, pastor of Grace Lutheran church, is lying close to death's door, and no hope is entertained for his recovery. Last Easter he was stricken with a slight paralytic stroke, but recovered sufficiently from that to be able to walk about with the support of a cane. This last illness is pneumonia and in his weakened physical state from his first illness is not able to combat the late affliction.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Gardlock, residing on South Side, will on next Saturday, if nothing intervenes to prevent, celebrate their golden wedding anniversary.

Chief of Police Clark left yesterday for Montgomery county on official business.

Miss Marie McCaully, of Philadelphia, is visiting her mother Mrs. Thad. Cassidy on River street.

Prof. Santee, of Pottsville, arrived in town yesterday and will take up his duties as one of the instructors in the High school next Monday.

Father Lynch pastor of the St. Timothy Catholic church, visited among old DuBois friends yesterday. Prior to his coming to Curwensville Father Lynch assisted Father McGivern in church work in DuBois, hence has many friends who are always glad to welcome him when he visits that city.

family and a few relatives of the bride witnessed the ceremony, the same being performed by Rev. Mr. Biddle, pastor of the M. E. church. After partaking of a fine wedding dinner the newly wedded couple boarded the 4 o'clock train over the B. & P. for Williamsport, where they will spend a few days with the groom's mother, and then proceed on their way to Gary, where they will make their home. Both the bride and groom have many warm friends in Curwensville who wish them unalloyed happiness during their journey through life.

Harry Bookheimer, of Scranton, who has been a guest in the home of Mrs. William Holden, south Walnut street, since last Friday, left for his city home today.

Mrs. Frederick Bloom, was successfully operated on at the Clearfield hospital yesterday. Mrs. Bloom was the eldest daughter of Samuel Norris of Pike township.

Miss Hilda Heighes, of DuBois, is visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Pifer on Thompson street.

Mrs. Thomas Wayne, of DuBois, spent yesterday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Pifer, North Thompson street.

Curwensville board of council met in an adjourned session Tuesday evening, all members being present except Holton. The only really item of business transacted was the granting of an order of $174.25 to the Order of Moose, as a reimbursement for use of that order's rooms during the influenza of last winter, as considerable damage was done to said rooms at that time. The matter of sewerage held over from last session referred back to committee. Orders were drawn in aggregate to amount of $400, which included street work. Reports of Burgess and Police read and accepted. Several other minor matters were brought up and discussed but no final action taken.

I saw it in The Progress.

The Home Town

Do you remember the old-fashioned good times in the little home town?
There were strawberry festivals in June, remember? Your mother always used to bake a cake for the strawberry festival and Jim Bond's mother was in charge of the ice-cream, and they got out the Japanese lanterns, and strung them from tree to tree on the town square, and you went and met everyone you knew and had the best kind of a time.

Then there was the Fourth of July celebration, when the Hon. Frederick Heydecker read the Declaration. They always chose Fred because he had a Prince Albert coat, and a fine speaking voice, everyone agreed. You could hear every "whereas" even out at the edge of the crowd, where the balloon peddler pushed his way along.

There was the Harvest Home, too, with the Japanese lanterns out again, but supplemented this time with jack o'lanterns made out of pumpkins, and shocks of corn and heans of squashes. Again you met the same old folks, all friendly and neighbor-like.

Well, it's all changed now, isn't it? The old town has boomed. There's a baby carriage factory, and a typewriter factory, and the canning factory that uses up the pumpkins that once made lanterns, and the town is full of "foreigners." You can go down Main street nowadays and not see a soul you know, hardly.

That is an epitome of the history of America. Once we were all neighbors and friends, all pretty much the same kind of folks living a simple, friendly, semi-rural life. Then came the age of invention, and our wonderful industrial expansion. We became a great manufacturing nation as well as a great agricultural nation. The factories caused the great drift of population from country to town and from small town to great city. Great industries called for labor from across the sea, and got it, thousands and millions in strange incoming hordes.

It was worth while, of course. We had to go in; we could not stagnate—and yet—we paid a price for it all. Part of the price was the loss of that old neighborly life. There are whole sections of town and whole blocks of the population of which we know nothing, and care less. Yet we sigh, now and then, for the old spirit. The change has affected us more than we realize. There was an ugly strike, right in the old town, with riots and lawlessness.

There are observers, who believe this loss of the old community life of America is one of the nation's saddest. But instead of deploring it idly and sentimentally, and going their way, they have cast about to find a remedy. They believe, and have good grounds for believing, they have found it.

In 600 cities near soldiers, sailors and marine corps training camps, in fifty or so big war industry centers, the neighborhood spirit has been brought to life again. In the camp towns, it was born of the desire to provide hospitality for men in uniform in their brief periods of leave. Men and women united to entertain the boys in service, and thus folk met who never had become acquainted before, though they had lived, so to speak, next door to each other for years. In the Community Houses, parents and boys and girls rubbed elbows at entertainments of all sorts, drawn by their common kinship to men in service.

In the war industry towns, the building up of a community spirit among diverse racial groups that had been interested theretofore only in the jobs the town had to offer, was one of the marvels of war-times in America.

And now a national organization has been formed to carry the kindly mission on in peace times. It is called Community Service (Incorporated), and is incorporated to co-operate nationally. If it can, beginning in such tangible ways as by developing neighborhood playgrounds, neighborhood clubs, all sorts of leisure time activities—build up again the old American spirit of equality and common social life, it will have performed no trivial service to the nation.

"I tell you you are running into a trap that you'll never get out of alive;
 And there's no treasure, and never has been except in your imagination."

"Ain't there?" breathed Layton
 softly. "We'll see about that!"

Wallen stood motionless for an instant. There was something ghastly ironical in the complacency of the other snugly inviting his own death.

"What are you going to do with me?" he demanded abruptly.

"Nothing!" said Layton airily.
 "Nothing—until we get there, except to give you a chance to see the real life aboard the ship and let you form your own conclusions as to whether you'd better open up or not."

"And then?" asked Wallen quietly.
 "And then," said Layton laughing,
 "If you haven't pried your jaws open
 by that time, I'll take that eleven hundred dollars back and twice you up for a taste of the cat; and if that don't work
 I'll turn you over to the crew, you and that Indian pal of yours, and let them settle with you for the Kanaka's murder."

"You're mad!" said Wallen again.
 "And of course," added Layton,
 pouring rum for himself deliberately,
 "if you make any trouble meanwhile, I ain't saying what'll happen."

Wallen, his face set, turned slowly toward the door.

Captain Layton raised his glass.
 "Here's a pleasant voyage to Arru-

 the liquor gurgled down his throat.

WILSON TELLS PEOPLE SOME NATIONS OF THE WORLD ARE PLANNING CONQUESTLEAGUE ONLY METHOD OF COMBATING GREED AND MILITARISTIC SCHEMESEXPLAINS TREATY TERMS IN VERY SIMPLE LANGUAGE SAYING IT MAKES GOOD OUR PROMISES

SURE TREATY WILL BE RATIFIED

MEMORIAL, HALL, COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 4.—"A new effort at conquest will be made by some nations as soon as the last war is recovered from unless the peace treaty including the league of nations is ratified."

This is the argument handed out to the people assembled in Memorial Hall, Columbus, today by President Wilson in his first speech of the attempt to force ratification of the treaty on the senate by carrying the fight to them through the people who he hopes to favorably impress with the league plan.

Continuing he said, "the league of nations is the only safeguard against the wars that loom up in the future. Furthermore, the league must be ratified to make good the promise to American soldiers that they were fighting a world war to make future wars impossible."

He declared that our failure to ratify the peace treaty would bring "peace into contempt."

Discussing the efficacy of the league he said, "I would rather have everybody on my side than be armed to the teeth without the league."

Still strong in his belief that he knows the real desires of the people of the nation he said, "I believe I know the heart of the people better than the foes of the league."

The President walked onto the rostrum clad in a neat business suit and was greeted with an outburst of shrieking cheers. Former Governor Campbell made the introductory address. He referred to Mr. Wilson as "the first citizen of the round world." Early in his address the President said, "I have for a long time desired to go out and report to my fellow citizens; I owe no report to anybody else."

Stating that the treaty was so bulky and voluminous that many had not carefully read it, he said, "perhaps you would like to know what is in the treaty?" He said the many speeches he had read on it threw no light on it. He then explained that the treaty was designed to punish Germany for her wrongs. He talked of the lands destroyed, people terrorized and outraged, yet pointed out that the makers of the treaty sought to exercise restraint and justice. He declared the terms of the treaty were harsh but that wronged peoples of Europe deserved reparation.

President Wilson came into contact with pain folks at Denison, Ohio, for the first time on the trip. An old man in the handshaking line said to the President: "I wish you success on your plan Mr. Wilson—I had two sons killed in the war—have only one left and I do not want to lose him in another."

"The treaty contains, among other things, a Magna Charta of labor, a thing unheard of until this interesting year of grace. One of the big things growing out of the treaty is the International Congress of Labor provided for under the terms of the treaty and which will be held in Washington in the near future. And let me tell you," he said grimly and with jaw thrust forward, "that meeting will be held no matter whether the treaty is ratified or not. The discovery has been made that nations are made up of its people and not of a few of its people."

Defending the treaty as a whole President Wilson declared, "If I could not have brought back this kind of a treaty I would not have come back at all."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 4.—The most spectacular series of debate and of the most far reaching consequences since the days of the notable Lincoln-Douglass debates of the Civil War started today at Columbus, Ohio, when the President made his first speech in the interest of the peace treaty and league of nations. Waiting on the other end of the wires at Washington, senators opposed to the ratification of the present pact literally sat on the end of the wire to gather the first words of battle and put out counter arguments. Only a presidential campaign could demand the attention of the nation as the President and the opposing senators expect to get on the contest. Meanwhile the Republican senators are closely watching administration affairs, particularly the promise to reduce the high cost of living. Attorney General Palmer has declared that there will be no let up in the federal program and that the living cost problem will not be permitted to be relegated to second place in the interest of the acceptance of the treaty.

ON THE TRAIN WITH THE PRESIDENT, PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 4.—President Wilson today embarked on his supreme effort to force the peace treaty and league of nations through the senate. In his private car he outlined the main points in his speech to be made at Columbus in the morning and discussed the campaign on which he has started. Passing through this state he waved at the occasional crowds that had gathered to get a glimpse of the train. His personal physician, Admiral Grayson, declared Mr. Wilson in fine physical trim for the campaign and his voice will be given constant attention as it is absolutely necessary that he return to Washington by October 1st. The President retired early last night as he desired to rise early this morning to put the finishing touches on his Columbus speech. Considerable executive business will be transacted on the train during the trip. The arrangements for the conference between capital and labor will be outlined and the men selected who are to make up the personnel of the conference.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Sept. 4.—Columbus is all spruced up for the President's visit here today. Five airplanes left for Newark, N. J. where they will meet the presidential train and escort it to Columbus. Governor Cox will lead the delegation which will escort the President to the state capital. He spoke at 11:30 for about one hour and at one o'clock departed for Indianapolis where he will speak this evening.

MAHAFFEY MAN
SUES N. Y. C. FOR
$23,000 DAMAGES

Daniel Belford of Mahaffey, has begun suit in the Clearfield county courts against the New York Central Railroad company, wherein he seeks to recover $23,749 which he alleges is due him under the terms of an agreement made with the railroad company May 15, 1915.

Belford is represented by Deputy Attorney General William I. Swoope and in his statement filed declares that while in the employ of the New York Central on February 16th, 1915, he was knocked down and run over by a train in the Clearfield yards and as the result of such occurrence lost both feet.

Subsequently on May 15, 1915, he entered into an agreement or settlement whereby the railroad company paid him $1,000 in cash and agreed to give him employment as watchman until he reached the age of 70 years.

In pursuance of that agreement Belford states that he received the $1,000 and as soon as he was able to get around was given a job as watchman by the company. On April 15, 1919, he alleges he was discharged without cause and suit is brought to recover the amount he would have received had he remained in the employ of the railroad company until he reached the age limit fixed when the settlement was made.

CHALLENGE FOR
LESLIE ROBERTS

Leo A. Hayat, champion middle-weight wrestler of California, arrived in town today for a ten day visit in the hope that he may be able to arrange at match with Leslie Roberts, the Boardman "strong boy."

Hayat was here with the athletic show accompanying the Copping carnival in 1917 and at that time he says he endeavored to get a match with Roberts but for some reason or other Roberts wanted none of his game.

He dropped into The Progress office this morning and authorized the Sporting Editor to issue a challenge to Roberts to wrestle for any size stakes Roberts or Manager Katzman may care to name.

Hayat has many friends in Clearfield who having seen both men work are of the opinion that the California wonder is able to master the Boardman miner.

Any communications addressed to Mr. Hayat care of the Sporting Editor of The Progress will reach him.

500 ENROLL THIS
YEAR FOR HIGH SCHOOL COURSE

The Clearfield public schools which opened Tuesday last are already down to business, the season's schedule is already in force and effect, and thanks to the splendid organization of the schools the pupils have picked up the "educational thread" where they laid it down May last and are hard at work on their studies.

The first day's registration totaled 1799 pupils, the largest first day enrollment in the history of the schools.

Following is the enrollment at the different schools:

High School	500
Junior High	250
Market Street	280
Third Ward	380
Fourth Ward	276
Reedsville	56
Primary Jr. High Bldg.	50

Total 1799

Some idea of the growth of our schools can be secured by noting the large number of pupils in the High School which starts off with 500. We could in each other that they are not the first of time nor passing size in the state with such an attendance in its High school. This fact alone speaks volumes for our High School and the standard it has attained.

City Superintendent Zerfoss will be assisted in his management of our schools this year by a corps of fifty-three teachers.

WED

A very quiet wedding was celebrated in Trinity Methodist Episcopal church this morning at 6:30 o'clock when the pastor, Rev. William W. Hartman said the words which united in the holy bonds of matrimony Walter E. McMurray and Miss Maud M. Stewart, a couple of Clearfield's most popular young people.

The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Stage and none but the immediate families of the contracting parties witnessed the ceremony.

Following the congratulations, the happy couple departed by automobile for Tyrone where they took a main line train for Philadelphia and Atlantic City where they will spend their honeymoon.

The bride was attired in a blue silvertone traveling suit and wore a black velvet hat.

The groom is a valued employee of the Clearfield Machine shops and a fine young man. His bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Stewart, of Fifth street and one of Clearfield's most charming and most highly respected young ladies.

The Progress joins their legion of friends in heartiest congratulations.

DIDN'T KNOW IT HIT HIM

The last hard electric storm to pass over Clearfield played a joke on our friend and neighbor Samuel I. Snyder. During the height of the storm following a vivid lightning flash and deafening burst of thunder "Jersey" was rocked in his bed as the "in a clean through the tube and the row boat on Lake Erie." "when she was rough", but after the final tremor "Jersey" resumed his interrupted snoring as though nothing had occurred.

He thought no more about it until this morning's rain began, when he discovered a leak in the roof and investigation disclosed that the house had been struck by lightning at the time first mentioned and some fifteen or twenty slate knocked off.

Mrs. C. P. Jacob of DuBois entertained the Current Events club Wednesday afternoon at the home of her mother Mrs. G. W. Snyder. Mrs. Dowler, Mrs. Jameson and Mrs. Guernsey Smith read interesting papers. Mrs. Clarence Stewart from Pittsburgh was a guest.

Miss Luella Greenleaf of Huntingdon, is visiting Miss Elizabeth Bain at her home on Whitmer street.

L. B. and George Waring of Keewardin are visiting in town.

Miss Ruth Johnston has returned from a visit with friends in Clearfield.

LOVE'S YOUNG

FRIEND COMES ALONG

That some Clearfield married men are furious lovers, when away from home, and that this old world is small place after all, is now known to several Clearfield people and the schools the pupils have picked up the "educational thread" where they laid it down May last and are hard at work on their studies.

BARRETT AND THE BRICK PLANT

Those who had dreams of smoking stacks and sizzling furnaces at the staid old Barrett station are due for a shock or at least a temporary interruption of their dreams. Although The Progress had what it believed to be the correct information of the brick makers who have been unusually active in the county for more than a year the publication of the story of the plant is to be located at Barrett brings a firm denial from any of the officials of the firm interested. J. O. Heitzenberger, Vice President of the Mt. Union Refractories Company at Clearfield last evening and immediately got in touch with the Progress office to issue a statement. He stated that he had no knowledge of the publication of the story before he reached Clearfield and that the story published must have received its information from the activities of the firm in the county. In commenting on the activities of the firm in the county he said that "although they had been prospecting in and around Barrett as well as other points throughout the county, it was by no means ascertained that a plant would be located at that point, and that thus far Barrett had received only the amount of consideration given at other points."

It is hard to perform a task for political credit or more things that may reflect credit to one or some of the candidates in the field. However, The Progress has been repeatedly requested to sum up the issues involved between the various candidates and beginning today will attempt to summarize the political situation within the Republican party by writing from a news standpoint from such information as we are enabled to garner from the fields of county politics. Between this issue and one week from today we will attempt to put into concrete form the claims of and objections to the various candidates as we hear them and if the truth hurts it must be borne by those whom it hits. It must be remembered though that much that we hear is only idle gossip as happily the day is past when any man or set of men can put his finger on the political situation and select or pick the winners for any office. This primary election which will be held on September 16th will not be one of many surprises or land slides as there is every indication that in many contests the preferences of the voters are quite equally divided. In no instance is there any real issue involved or any sign of any unusual or organized effort to gain party control and this feature of the contests alone will redound to the ultimate overwhelming success of the party at the polls at the general election.

The Progress has always been against organization control of the primaries and since those who have heretofore sought to dictate the names of the holders for ulterior motives have chosen to relegate their selfish desires in the interest of party harmony and success these articles will be carefully written in order that no candidate or coteries of candidates may gain an unfair advantage from what is recorded. No attention will be given to any of the usual charges against any candidate.

PARTY ANNOUNCEMENTS

I hereby certify that the following named persons have announced for the several positions named on the Republican ticket in compliance with the party rules, and the provisions of the Uniform Primary law, have filed their petitions in the office of the County Commissioners to be voted for at the Primary election, September 16th, 1919.

The Parrots—father, mother and two charming daughters—live in Southern California. At the time the action begins Stephen Parcot, the father, is in the far North pursuing his avocation as an explorer. Mrs. Parcot has hurried overseas to Belgium to bring back one daughter who has been placed in a convent there. Dimny Parcot (the lead in the picture, played by Blanche Sweet, who also appears as the other sister in several parts of the production) is alone in the beautiful Parcot home. She receives a letter from her loved ones abroad—a letter that almost sends her reason tottering from its throne—a letter that tells her that invading soldiers have committed against both her mother and her sister "the unpardonable sin."

The letter has been one last note of explanation—and a plea that mother and sister be forgotten, a cry that their disgrace be shielded from the world.

With the letter carefully hidden in a wallet, Dimny, half crazed with grief and not figuring the difficulties of the task she has set or herself, sets out to find her loved ones.

Her train is delayed just outside a little town in the Middle West. A chance traveling acquaintance offers aid and, later as Dimny and her acquaintance are walking through a shaded street in the little village just at dusk, the acquaintance, smitten by Dimny's beauty, attempts to force his attentions upon her. Dimny collapses; her reason flees. Only a zephyr of the breath of life remains! Weeks later she recovers her strength, both mental and physical, to find that she has been nursed in the home of the Windsors.

Noll Windsor, an undergraduate at the college in the little town, has learned to love Dimny. She tells him her story—and torn between the fear of all men and the thought that she may waver from her path of chosen duty, leaves the home without announcement, to continue on her journey.

Soon after, young Windsor answers his government's call to serve with Hoover's eBigan Relief commission in the devastated country. He arrives in Washington to secure his passports and discovers Dimny, who has been in the capitol city for some time, unable to continue her journey for the reason that the government has discontinued the issuance of passports to "unmarried" women. Noll and Dimny effect a marriage of convenience, Dimny's passports being secure in no other way.

Upon their arrival in Belgium, Noll, husband in name only, finds it possible to do much to aid Dimny in her search for her people. Together they travel the devastated regions, even penetrating the enemy country—for in those days the United States had not entered the war.

A veritable pawn of fate, it is Dimny's misfortune to encounter the very beast who had ravished her sister. When he sees the fresh young girl from California, Colonel Klemm mistakes her for the sister whom he has so shamefully treated in Belgium. He is mystified—and his passion still leads him. Because he thinks Dimny a spy against the government and because he wishes to possess her again, as he thinks, Klemm hounds Dimny and Noll everywhere they go.

Klemm is outwitted. Dimny's mother and sister are found, but not before a second horror in her rail young life has snapped the thread that tied the little sister to Earth and a bitter disgrace.

Dimny, her mother, Nell, and an interesting little group of refugees, who have been made members of the party are making a mad dash for the Holland border when a bullet sends Mrs. Parcot close to the brink of death. When she recovers she takes back to her husband in the states, only the story of her terrible experience.

Dimny and Noll find that their "marriage of convenience" must be re-enacted as a "marriage of necessity"—necessary because both have come to desire it.

Sage Tea Keeps Your Hair Dark

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair loses its color and lustre, or when it fades turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulfur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

When you want your Ford car repaired insist always upon getting the genuine Ford parts, made by the Ford Motor company, in order to insure reliable quality. There are "spurious" "counterfeit", "imitation" parts made by outside concerns who have no regard for quality in material, so insist on your Garage or Repair Man furnishing you the genuine Ford parts. All reliable garages may now buy the genuine Ford parts from us—so there's no excuse for using the "bogus" parts. To be sure, bring your car to us for repairs or replacements.

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

Why? Because in the very first issue that you'll get, if you hustle your dollar right over to me, there is the beginning of a series of articles called Big Country Merchants.

There will be ten of these articles, telling how ten men in ten towns succeeded in making themselves known as the biggest country merchants. There's no secret of their success that isn't open to every storekeeper in this county. Don't you want to get into their class? Don't you want increased farmers' business?

Of course, this article is only part of all the help in the September 13th issue—there are a lot of other articles and stories about farmers and farming for storekeepers and for farmers and farm women, for gardeners and orchardists and poultrymen. And yet 52 big vital issues cost only one dollar, about two cents apiece! Why "hold out"?

stuck to it, and you'd have been a fool if you hadn't!

"Now, then, I put it to you, all we ask is our share. After that, we'll land you anywhere you say, or, if you like, you can have a berth aboard—I'm getting kind of sick of standing watch myself, and a third officer wouldn't come anyways naiss."

Wallen looked first at Laynton, then at Mott, who was glowering and sulen-faced, then back at Laynton again.

"Look here!" he burst out, almost insanely. "Either you're crazy, or I am."

"Oh, no!" retorted Captain Laynton easily. "Neither of us is! You ain't willing to give up gracious like while you think there's a chance you don't have to split the pot, that's all. Mebbe you think I'm blading?"

"Don't fool yourself! We made up our minds from about the minute this hooker was chartered that there was a lot more behind this search-for-a-son business. And now we're sure of it. I'll take you into my cabin and show you why in a minute. But first, to let you know I mean business, you can take a look at my hand."

"We wasn't saying anything till old Wallen got killed, for whatever he was after he was bound to lead us to along with him, eh?"

"Then he shuffled out, and there wasn't anything in his papers that was any good to us—except that money that I turned over to kind of woo your confidence, if you get the idea! But we figured that what he knew the son would know, so mebbe you can figure out why we started to follow the Upolo's itinerary."

"Well, we played in luck—we found you. So long as we thought you were the son we let you have your head, just as we'd done with the old man, without trying to force your hand, because—he grinned wickedly—"we're a patient lot."

"But now that I find we're birds of a feather, my lad, we ain't playing that game any more."

"Now, then, we know you were on the Upolo with young Wallen, and what I want to know is what he told you before he died that started you going. You come across with that, and we'll play fair on the divvy; if you don't, you'll wish that whatever saints you swear by that you were in the hands of the authorities answering for that threnat-sitting job back in Singapore, instead of in mine! That's a plain statement—eh? Well, what d'ye say?"

"I say that I'm Wallen," said Wallen steadily. "That I committed no murder in Singapore, and that this treasure-hunt idea is pure imagination."

Captain Laynton scowled. "You conx a mule first," he said significantly; "after that you shun be out of him. However, I ain't through coaxing yet. Come along to my cabin."

They entered the captain's cabin; and Laynton, spreading out a chart on the locker, stabbed at it with his forefinger.

"Anything familiar about that?" he grinned.

Wallen leaned forward. "Certainly," he replied, in surprise. "It's the north coast of Arru, where Mac-

Indicated the Position.

Knight's station is—where I was brought ashore after I was picked up." Laynton scowled savagely, and picking up a pair of dividers indicated the position with exact precision.

"To the north a bit, among those islands," he snapped. "You know fast enough what I mean."

Wallen shook his head. "Don't you?" Laynton rasped. "Well, how about this?" He pulled a piece of paper from his pocket, and flattened it out on the chart. "They correspond, don't they? You dropped this out of your pocket. I had a Kanaka aboard then, who picked it up and gave it to me."

He smiled at Wallen unpleasantly. "I haven't got that Kanaka now. He disappeared. There's something damned queer about it—and about those shots last night, wouldn't you say? D'ye think I'm a fool—d'ye think I wouldn't stake my oath that mealy-mouthed Indian you brought aboard with you didn't fire 'em? But I still thought you were Wallen then, and I was still for giving you all the rope you wanted."

"Well, here's the latitude and longitude on the paper, and here's the position on the chart, and I guess in a general way we're pretty hot on the scent—it's only the few details that may be lacking when we get there that I'm asking you to supply. What?"

It was a moment before Wallen spoke.

"The position given on that piece of paper had come, Gunga had said, direct from Ram Gulab Singh. There were many islands around Mac-Knight's station, and among them, evidently enough now, Ram Gulab Singh had his lair."

"Do you mean," he asked abruptly, "that you are going there?"

"D'ye think there's any doubt about it?" returned Laynton caustically.

"Then," said Wallen earnestly, "I warn you, you're running the head of every one aboard this ship into a noose. If you want the truth of the whole business, it's this: Years back my father had trouble with a powerful native named Ram Gulab Singh, who was and is the head of many of the Malay pirates, that infest these waters. The man swore revenge. The feud still exists."

"It was to save me from a plot Ram Gulab Singh had hatched to murder me on the Upolo that my father chartered you. Furthermore, there was no accident aboard here when my father died. It was this Kanaka, that you say has disappeared, who murdered him—the man who started this cock-and-bull story about treasure because he is in Ram Gulab Singh's pay, and that paper he gave you was to lure the ship into his master's claws if he was unsuccessful in doing away with my father himself."

"He did away with my father, but he still gave you the paper for the same purpose, except, of course, that I am substituted in my father's place."

There was an incredulous sneer on the faces of the two men.

"Sounds almost as fishy as you writing yourself down dead in the log!" commented Laynton, with an ugly laugh. "Of course, you don't want us to go there, eh? Well, that's all right, and thanks for the warning; but don't worry about us coming to any harm, though it does credit to your heart! We don't scare aboard this ship. Mebbe if there was the prospect of a bit of a scrap it wouldn't stand in our way none, either. Have you by any chance taken note of the crew?"

A sort of savage anger came upon Wallen.

"I want you they look like cut-throats," he said evenly.

"You're wrong!" rejoined Laynton with evil smoothness. "You ain't half looked at 'em, and you don't do 'em credit. Fallen angels are saints alongside of 'em; and there ain't one of 'em but has been aboard here with me for the matter of a good few years—which proves that your yarn about the Kanaka and this 'ere friend of yours, Ram Whine-d'ye-call-him is another lie."

"Ain't likely you've ever heard of the Monlegh before, because we've got a superstition aboard here that keeping the same name too long is bad luck."

"When we carry cargo it's because times are infernally poor and the picking-thin—the crew has got a preference for private pearl beds, or mebbe the opium trade, or I've even known 'em to horn in on a bit of black-birding by way of variety. We've been living under a kind of righteous restraint, Mr. Man, out of deference to who we thought you were, and I could see the crew was sort of chafing under it; but I guess you'll get a better idea of things from now on, and by the time we get down off Arru again you won't need to be told what to expect if you don't come around to our way of thinking."

He turned suddenly and flipped the little slip of paper to the second officer. "Mott, get away with you, and work up that course—we've had enough pleasure cruising toward Sumatra!"

And then it seemed that for the first time the full significance of the situation dawned upon Wallen—and it was as though a cold thing was at his heart.

"Wait!" he cried hoarsely. "What I've told you is the truth. But if you're bent on your own destruction, then for God's sake get Miss MacKay off the ship first—land her somewhere, anywhere."

It was Mott who answered—but with the locker between them.

"Not by a d—d sight!" he announced with a leer. "I'll take care of the girl."

There was something hideous in the glint of the man's eyes. As with Laynton, all veneer was gone now, and the grin on the heavy lips was an evil thing.

It brought the blood surging to Wallen's temples—and, receding, left his face a deadly white.

"Mott," he whispered queerly, "as God likes, I'll—"

"You stow your jaw, Mott," Laynton interjected, with a blimpant laugh, "or you'll be giving Mr. Wallen an unfavorable idea of the discipline aboard here."

For a moment Wallen stared at Laynton without speaking—then the words came with a passionate rush: "You're mad!" he cried. "You're go-

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Mrs. R. F. Fleming of Bloomingtown, who was in Clearfield hospital for almost a month was brought home last Saturday. Her improvement is very slow, and will probably be several months ere she will be able to attend to her usual household duties.

The latest hospital report from the condition of young William Addelman, who was so seriously injured last week in the hard clay mines, is that his chances for recovery are favorable, unless blood poisoning sets in, which would impair his chance for life greatly.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wall, Mrs. V. U. Spencer, Lew Vaughn and Miss Dorothy Wolf, Scott Ammerman and Miss Lilla Martin, Messrs. Sol Robinson Emory Daub, Ralph Pilkington and Kelly Bloom were Curwensville people who attended the opera at Clearfield Tuesday evening.

Several Curwensville men were up before Burgess Traister on Tuesday evening. Two were charged with indulging a little too freely from the "flowing bowl." One was assessed $10 and the other $5. The third party was charged with fighting and disorderly conduct and paid into the borough exchequer the sum of $5.00. The case of the fourth man was held over until further investigation as to his guilt could be made.

At this writing (Wednesday night) Rev. I. P. Hawkins, pastor of Grace Lutheran church, is lying close to death's door, and no hope is entertained for his recovery. Last Easter he was stricken with a slight paralytic stroke, but recovered sufficiently from that to be able to walk about with the support of a cane. This last illness is pneumonia and in his weakened physical state from his first illness is not able to combat the late affliction.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Gardlock, residing on South Side, will on next Saturday, if nothing intervenes to prevent, celebrate their golden wedding anniversary.

Chief of Police Clark left yesterday for Montgomery county on official business.

Miss Marie McCaully, of Philadelphia, is visiting her mother Mrs. Thad. Cassidy on River street.

Prof. Santee, of Pottsville, arrived in town yesterday and will take up his duties as one of the instructors in the High school next Monday.

Lieutenant David Ferguson, of Clearfield, spent a part of yesterday shaking hands with his many Curwensville friends.

Misses Maud and Blanche Graham, former teachers in the Curwensville schools, were the guests of Mrs. Aggar Bloom several days of this week.

Father Lynch pastor of the St. Timothy Catholic church, visited among old DuBois friends yesterday. Prior to his coming to Curwensville Father Lynch assisted Father McGivern in church work in DuBois, hence has many friends who are always glad to welcome him when he visits that city.

Today at high noon a quiet family wedding was consummated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Davidson, when Miss Bees Thompson youngest daughter of Watt H. Thompson, was wedded to Bradley Gamble, of Gary, Indiana. Only the family and a few relatives of the bride witnessed the ceremony, the same being performed by Rev. Mr. Biddle, pastor of the M. E. church. After partaking of a fine wedding dinner the newly wedded couple boarded the 4 o'clock train over the B. & P. for Williamsport, where they will spend a few days with the groom's mother, and then proceed on their way to Gary, where they will make their home. Both the bride and groom have many warm friends in Curwensville who wish them unalloyed happiness during their journey through life.

Harry Bookheimer, of Scranton, who has been a guest in the home of Mrs. William Holden, south Walnut street, since last Friday, left for his city home today.

Mrs. Frederick Bloom, was successfully operated on at the Clearfield hospital yesterday. Mrs. Bloom was the eldest daughter of Samuel Norris of Pike township.

Miss Hilda Heighes, of DuBois, is visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Pifer on Thompson street.

Mrs. Thomas Wayne, of DuBois, spent yesterday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Pifer, North Thompson street.

Curwensville board of council met in an adjourned session Tuesday evening, all members being present except Holton. The only really item of business transacted was the granting of an order of $174.25 to the Order of Moose, as a reimbursement for use of that order's rooms during the influenza of last winter, as considerable damage was done to said rooms at that time. The matter of sewerage held over from last session referred back to committee. Orders were drawn in aggregate to amount of $400, which included street work. Reports of Burgess and Police read and accepted. Several other minor matters were brought up and discussed but no final action taken.

The Home Town

Do you remember the old-fashioned good times in the little home town?
There were strawberry festivals in June, remember? Your mother always used to bake a cake for the strawberry festival and Jim Bond's mother was in charge of the ice-cream, and they got out the Japanese lanterns, and strung them from tree to tree on the town square, and you went and met everyone you knew and had the best kind of a time.

Then there was the Fourth of July celebration, when the Hon. Frederick Heydecker read the Declaration. They always chose Fred because he had a Prince Albert coat, and a fine speaking voice, everyone agreed. You could hear every "whereas" even out at the edge of the crowd, where the balloon peddler pushed his way along.

There was the Harvest Home, too, with the Japanese lanterns out again, but supplemented this time with jack o'lanterns made out of pumpkins, and shocks of corn and heans of squashes. Again you met the same old folks, all friendly and neighbor-like.

Well, it's all changed now, isn't it? The old town has boomed. There's a baby carriage factory, and a typewriter factory, and the canning factory that uses up the pumpkins that once made lanterns, and the town is full of "foreigners." You can go down Main street nowadays and not see a soul you know, hardly.

That is an epitome of the history of America. Once we were all neighbors and friends, all pretty much the same kind of folks living a simple, friendly, semi-rural life. Then came the age of invention, and our wonderful industrial expansion. We became a great manufacturing nation as well as a great agricultural nation. The factories caused the great drift of population from country to town and from small town to great city. Great industries called for labor from across the sea, and got it, thousands and millions in strange incoming hordes.

It was worth while, of course. We had to go in; we could not stagnate—and yet—we paid a price for it all. Part of the price was the loss of that old neighborly life. There are whole sections of town and whole blocks of the population of which we know nothing, and care less. Yet we sigh, now and then, for the old spirit. The change has affected us more than we realize. There was an ugly strike, right in the old town, with riots and lawlessness.

There are observers, who believe this loss of the old community life of America is one of the nation's saddest. But instead of deploring it idly and sentimentally, and going their way, they have cast about to find a remedy. They believe, and have good grounds for believing, they have found it.

In 600 cities near soldiers, sailors and marine corps training camps, in fifty or so big war industry centers, the neighborhood spirit has been brought to life again. In the camp towns, it was born of the desire to provide hospitality for men in uniform in their brief periods of leave. Men and women united to entertain the boys in service, and thus folk met who never had become acquainted before, though they had lived, so to speak, next door to each other for years. In the Community Houses, parents and boys and girls rubbed elbows at entertainments of all sorts, drawn by their common kinship to men in service.

In the war industry towns, the building up of a community spirit among diverse racial groups that had been interested theretofore only in the jobs the town had to offer, was one of the marvels of war-times in America.

And now a national organization has been formed to carry the kindly mission on in peace times. It is called Community Service (Incorporated), and is incorporated to co-operate nationally. If it can, beginning in such tangible ways as by developing neighborhood playgrounds, neighborhood clubs, all sorts of leisure time activities—build up again the old American spirit of equality and common social life, it will have performed no trivial service to the nation.

 This Ram Gulab Singh will have

"I tell you you are running into a
 trap that you'll never get out of alive,
 And there's no treasure, and never has been except in your imagination."

"Ain't there?" breathed Layton
 softly. "We'll see about that!"

Wallen stood motionless for an instant. There was something ghastly
 ironical in the complacency of the other snugly inviting his own death.

"What are you going to do with me?" he demanded abruptly.

"Nothing!" said Layton airily.
 "Nothing—until we get there, except to give you a chance to see the real life aboard the ship and let you form
 your own conclusions as to whether you'd better open up or not."

"And then?" asked Wallen quietly.
 "And then," said Layton laughing,
 "If you haven't pried your jaws open
 by that time, I'll take that eleven hundred dollars back and twice you up for a taste of the cat; and if that don't work
 I'll turn you over to the crew, you and that Indian pal of yours, and let them
 settle with you for the Kanaka's murder."

"You're mad!" said Wallen again.
 "And of course," added Layton,
 pouring rum for himself deliberately,
 "if you make any trouble meanwhile, I
 ain't saying what'll happen."

Wallen, his face set, turned slowly
 toward the door.

Captain Layton raised his glass.
 "Here's a pleasant voyage to Arru-Mr. Wallen!" he said—and laughed as the liquor gurgled down his throat.
